

Mimi Robinson, a San Francisco-based designer, has been creating products for retailers such as Crate and Barrel, Target, Zak Design, Chronicle Books and Design Within Reach that reflect her global outlook and love of diverse culture.

For the past ten years she has collaborated with the non-profit organization Aid to Artists, which works with craftspeople in small villages in Peru to create products, utilizing traditional skills and local materials to help build local and international markets for their work.

Robinson recently visited Santa Fe, New Mexico where she toured the renowned Pueblo pottery collections at the Museum of Indian Arts & Culture, which clearly inspire some of her grounded and whimsical work.
