Organic farming – Heritage, Libeco’s organic collection

For growing and scutching the flax, we have worked closely with a group of farmers in Seine-et-Marne (France) who have been cultivating flax for more than 10 years.

In this magnificent undulating countryside they have created an organic area of some 400 hectares. Gradually, the land regained its balance and biodiversity was recreated, with the return of earthworms, ladybirds, and bees.

An organic microclimate has been developed where crops are obviously happy and where plants can grow at their natural pace again.

More information on organic farming is in our organic film.
